*Study Information & Consent Form

This is a study conducted by researchers at [redacted] about how people interpret university speech policies. You will be shown 2 policies and 20 examples of speech for each, and asked whether each example is permitted or prohibited under the policy. The data we collect will be used as part of a larger project on developing methods for quantifying ambiguity in policy language.

- The study takes about 20-25 minutes.
- Participation is voluntary. You may skip any question or stop at any time without penalty.
- The risks of participating are minimal. There is no direct benefit to you beyond contributing to research.
- Your responses are anonymous. We do not collect your name or other identifying information. De-identified data may be shared with other researchers or used in future research.
- For questions about the study, contact [redacted] via [redacted]
- You are not waiving any legal claims, rights or remedies because of your participation in this research study. If you feel you have been treated unfairly, or you have questions regarding your rights as a study participant you may [redacted]

We emphasize that you may find some of the examples of speech offensive, upsetting, or objectionable. Some of the speech described or quoted in the examples could be reasonably interpreted as controversial, prejudiced, discriminatory, or as celebrating or endorsing violence against specific people or groups. If you do not want to read this kind of language, please exit this page and do not participate in the study.

Do you consent to partipate in this study?

- I am 18 or older, have read and understood the above, and consent to participate
- I do not consent

Next page